

Oasi Alberoni

A natural site protected by the WWF

Oasi Alberoni extends for 160 hectares protected by the WWF located at the southern tip of the Lido island. The most wild beach in Lido is known for its white and grey sandy dunes.

The complex dune system started to develop in the 1800s and is home to a diverse ecosystem, including protected bird species Kentish Plover and Little Tern.

How shall I behave in nature sites and protected areas?

- Do not abandon waste but throw it in the litter bins or take it home with you
- Do not abandon cigarette butts which, apart from being waste, could cause dangerous fires
- Admire flowers, insects, eggs, plants and fruit but leave them where they are and do not pick them up
- Respect nesting areas: do not pass through these areas, which are marked with signs or delimited, and do not plant your parasol or lay out your towel here
- Do not disturb wildlife: if you see any animals, observe them from a distance and do not disturb them; lower your voice
- Keep your dogs on a leash
- Use bicycles only on designated roads
- Choose to camp in designated areas only
